MILLIONAIRE HOUSEHOLDS

And Their Domestic Economy

With Hints Upon Fine Living

By MARY ELIZABETH CARTER

Cover Design by MARGARET ARMSTRONG

12mo, cloth, gilt top, $1.40 net; postage, 14c. additional

More or less personality belongs to this book. It describes how the "butcher, the baker, and the candlestick-maker" receive their orders from famous families in the millionaire class; how parlors and bedrooms are taken care of; how preparations are made for balls, receptions, etc.; and how, in general, the domestic affairs, as regards the direction of servants, are administered. The author was for some time superintending housekeeper of one of the largest establishments in New York city. This book is decidedly interesting, and will appeal to women who preside over far less pretentious homes. What she has to say might be applied to houses with only one or two servants, where great show must be made on limited resources.

UNOFFICIAL

By the Hon. Mrs. WALTER R. D. FORBES

Author of "Blight," "A Gentleman," "Dumb," etc.

(No. 318, Town and Country Library) 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

Justin McCarthy, writing from London to The New York Independent, says: "Among the works of fiction lately published, one novel stands out distinctly in my memory because of its clever portraiture and its striking situations. It is called 'Unofficial, A Two-Days' Drama,' and is by the Hon. Mrs. Walter Forbes, who has already written several successful novels. The story compressed into this two days' drama is thrillingly told, and there is one scene in especial which is constructed with so vivid a dramatic effect that it seems to stand before me like something acted by a great company on the stage. This scene alone would give life to the novel even if there were nothing else, and indeed there is much else which is well qualified to hold the attention of the reader."

Youth

Tales of Adventure on Sea and Land

by

JOSEPH CONRAD

Author of "Lord Jim."

These stories represent the high-water mark of the author's fiction, and have been the success of the London literary season. One critic goes so far as to say that the title story alone is sufficient to place Conrad in rank with the foremost writers of fiction in any language.

The Glasgow Evening News says: "'Youth'—one of the very best short stories in the English language."

An unequalled picture of the New York life of to-day, with the Rialto, Newspaper Row, and Wall Street furnishing the setting for a charming love story that is full of vital human interest.

The Chameleon

By JAMES WEBER LINN

Author of "The Second Generation."

This novel deals with a type of character common in modern life; the victim of introspection, whose sole concern in his actions or his motives is the effect they will produce on others. The struggle of his sense of sincerity against his inborn instinct to pose makes the story. The scene is laid in a new Western college town, and the side views of educational philanthropy as practiced by Western commercial barons are highly amusing.

True Love

A Comedy of the Affections

By EDITH WYATT

Author of "Everyone His Own Way."

A keen satire upon modern life, especially as it is lived to-day in Chicago. The qualities which W. D. Howells praised so highly in the author's short stories are even more notably present in this more important work.

A Truthful Star has Risen in the Literary Firmament

Albert E. Hunt, in the Philadelphia North American.

YOUR average novel-reader of these days has no inclination toward the story that does not "end happily." The argument is that our hurried modern life has enough of stress and vicissitude and that the chief aim and purpose of fiction should be to take us out of it.

Fortunately, these malcontents seem to forget that literature, to be worth the name, must be a transcript of life, and that life, in too many instances, does not "end happily." They are willing to accept a quantity of strife and struggle, but the last chapter, by all means, must reward the virtuous and destroy the wicked.

Indeed, so insistent has this demand become that only the ablest makers of books are daring enough to close their pages with a sigh or a tear. Men of the class of Thomas Hardy may do so, but, alas, his class is confined to himself.

A Surprising Production

It is surprising, therefore, to come upon a novel written by a person whose name is utterly unfamiliar, yet who has the temerity to follow her own theories and convictions as to "happy endings." The title of the book is, "What Manner of Man," the author is Edna Kenton and the publishers are the Bobbs-Merrill Company, of Indianapolis.

In its theme, "What Manner of Man" is distinctly unpleasant but the power of the book, in its thought and treatment, is undeniable. It is a study of two characters, a man and a woman, and the exposition and development are done with such penetration and skill that one can scarcely believe the work to be that of a beginner.

Kirk Thayer is an artist. His art is his all and he sacrifices everything to it. Says one of the other characters to him: "Sometimes I think you could do what those fearful artists of the Middle Ages did—crucify a man and paint him while he was dying, so that all the death strain of the muscles might be absolutely flawless."

Thayer is looking for a model for what he feels will be his greatest picture. He finds her during a visit to a little island, lying dreary and almost inaccessible, off the north coast of Scotland. She is a superb creature named Clodah Rohan, daughter of a sturdy stock, but primitive and natural.

Love at First Sight

At first sight she loves Thayer, though she has never before known even an intimation of the feeling.

Thayer is determined to have her at any cost, and he goes so far as to marry her solely that she may become the model for his great picture. There the story really begins. The simple-minded girl's heart is broken to serve his art.

Repentance comes to him, but it is too late. Indeed, the reader feels that were it all to be acted over again this man would do no differently.

In the hurried limitations of a brief review, it is hard to convey a sense of the strength of this remarkable first book. No doubt, the same story is enacted among us every day, but the pity of it is none the less for that.

If she maintains the high plane of this book in her future productions, the name of Edna Kenton will have to be reckoned with in our literary considerations hereafter.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY will publish on the 28th inst. "Under the Rose," by Frederic S. Isham, with illustrations by Christy.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready "Six Trees," a new collection of stories by Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, in all of which the trees are potent factors in the tragedies or comedies of the lives the author writes about; also, "In the Garden of Charity," a new story by Basil King, author of "Let No Man Put Asunder."

D. APPLETON & Co. will bring out shortly "Unofficial, a Two-Days' Drama," by the Hon. Mrs. Walter R. D. Forbes, author of "Blight," etc., of which Justin McCarthy has said: "Among the works of fiction lately published [this] novel stands out distinctly in my memory because of its clever portraiture and its striking situations;" also, Millionaire Households and their Domestic Economy, with hints upon fine living," by Mary Elizabeth Carter, who describes how the "butcher, the baker and the candlestick-maker" receive their orders from the Astors, the Goulds and other famous families in the millionaire class, how parlors and bedrooms are taken care of, how preparations are made for balls, receptions, etc., and how, in general, the domestic affairs, as regards the direction of servants, are administered.

ARNOLD & COMPANY, 420 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, have just ready Mrs. Rorer's "New Cook Book." This book has no connection with Mrs. Rorer's other cook book of which 100,000 copies have been sold, nor is it in any sense a new edition of an old book. It is entirely dissimilar, and constructed along different lines, so that her two books do not in any way conflict with each other—but rather supplement or complement each other. One who has used her former book will also want this. It is not a mere recipe book but a work on domestic science, telling the things one needs to know about cooking, living, health and the easiest and best ways of housekeeping. It covers all the departments of cookery, giving an abundance of new recipes in each. The illustrations are valuable in their practical application. There's a full set on the proper method of carving meats, poultry, game, etc., and a set of tables showing the correct way to lay a course dinner.

MCCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY'S first publication day this spring will be February 25. On that date they will bring out a number of interesting books, most of them fiction. The most important in the list are "Lees and Leaven," a clever novel of the cosmopolitan and panoramic life of New York, by Edward W. Townsend, author of "Chimmie Fadden;" "The Chameleon," a story of a man's experiments with his emotions and the unhappiness they bring, by James Weber Linn, author of "The Second Generation;" "The Squireen," a strong novel of temperament, the scene of which is laid in North Ireland, by Shan F. Bullock, author of "Irish Pastorals;" and "True Love," a cleverly written, satirical and humorous novel of life of today in Chicago. Two books on their list bear the stamp of a London success—"Youth," by Joseph Conrad, author of "Lord Jim;" and "Anna of the Five Towns," by Arnold Bennett, author of "The Great Babylon Hotel." "Youth" contains three stories of adventure on sea and land, and critics have said that to have written "Youth," places Conrad in rank with the best short story writers of any language. "Anna of the Five Towns" tells the story of a sincere girl's life and her pathetic struggle for the right to be happy, amid the cant and hypocrisy of a non-conformist community in Staffordshire, England.

In preparing his work the author acknowledges himself largely indebted to Bryce's "American commonwealth." He is professor of American history and politics, Indiana University.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

FEBRUARY 21, 1903.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, should reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

TO PREVENT FROSTED WINDOWS.

HOWEVER poetic one might grow at the sight of frost—on the pumpkin, for instance, or on the chestnut burr—no storekeeper, that is, no particular storekeeper, at any rate, hails the appearance of frost on his store windows at this season of the year, with any other poetic outburst than that of the Kiplingesque "cuss word and the damn."

How to prevent frost forming on store windows has been the study of storekeepers and window dressers for years, and many theories have been spun out on the subject, all of them more or less satisfactory to the one who evolved the theory, but less so to the one who attempts to put into practice the theorist's ideas.

"Frosted" windows, as every one who has paid any attention to the subject might know, result from unequal temperatures on the outside and inside of the glass. The glass, cold from its contact with the outer air, condenses and eventually freezes the moisture of the warmer air within, forming the frost coating. So the secret of treating with the frost question is one of maintaining equable temperatures.

This is more easily said than done, however. It is safe to say that no system is wholly successful in the coldest weather. The best window trimmers differ on methods. Some insist that a system of ventilation between the outside and inside is the proper method of preventing frosting, while others advocate the air-tight window as the most successful.

The system of ventilation between the outside and inside has one serious drawback, namely, that it admits dirt and dust. As a rule it is better adapted to small windows, and to windows already constructed, than to larger windows. There are various ways of ventilating; but in general it consists of cutting a space or a number of small holes through the window frame at the bottom and top of the window that fronts on the street. Then the back of the window from the store proper is closed up. In this way a current of cold air is kept circulating inside the show window that keeps the interior at the same temperature that prevails in the street. The air holes need not be large, and should be covered with fine wire gauze to allow as little dust as possible to enter. As has been said, the difficulty of keeping out dirt is a serious drawback to this system, but it is in very general use.

Another method of ventilating is to run a tin or metal tube about an inch in diameter along the bottom of the pane. This is pierced with holes along the top and one end is extended downward and shaped like an inverted funnel. Under this a lamp or gas jet is kept burning, and out of the perforations the heat passes up along the window and prevents the formation of frost. There is danger, however, of cracking the glass by this method.

The air-tight method is in favor chiefly in stores with large windows or those of newer construction. The air-tight method requires a window built as carefully as a separate room. In fact, in the large stores each window really is a small room. It is sealed carefully, and the entrance is a small door, padded and sealed to prevent any circulation of air through it. The heating apparatus is removed as far as possible from the window to prevent the air inside becoming overheated. By this means some of the larger stores have been quite successful in preventing frosted windows

For the storekeeper who has no background to his show window no cure can be offered. His case is hopeless unless he goes without heat in his store, or stops breathing.

Much depends upon keeping the window glass in good condition. If the services of a professional window cleaner are not available, the storekeeper should remember that in cleaning windows in winter time water must be eschewed, as water is bound to steam the window. Dry, cold air is necessary to prevent freezing. Moisture and heat are causes of window freezing. Alcohol is the best liquid with which to wash windows in winter. A very weak solution cleanses the windows and will not add to the humidity of the air circulating near the window. Some recommend rubbing the windows two or three times a week with a cloth dipped in glycerine, polishing afterwards with tissue-paper or old newspapers.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS AND E. & J. B. YOUNG & CO. AMALGAMATE.

An important amalgamation has recently been arranged, by which two of the largest and oldest Bible publishing concerns trading in America and Great Britain have been consolidated.

In the United States the businesses formerly carried on by Thomas Nelson & Sons and E. & J. B. Young & Co. have been absorbed by an American corporation, organized under New York State laws, and styled Thomas Nelson & Sons, which will combine all the publishing and manufacturing interests of the respective firms.

As early as 1848, Eyre & Spottiswoode (the Queen's Printers), realized the importance of the American market, and established a branch house in New York. This branch house, popularly known as "The London Bible Warehouse," was continued until 1868. It was among the early settlers of the book colony in Nassau Street, and, when the uptown movement began, it moved to 626 Broadway, and then to Cooper Union. In 1868 its ownership passed by purchase into American hands, having been bought by Pott & Amery, who in 1871 were succeeded by Pott, Young & Co. From 1881 until 1903 the business was owned and conducted by E. & J. B. Young & Co.

Thomas Nelson & Sons, of Edinburgh and London, established their American branch house in 1855, which has been continuously maintained, building up a name and reputation of the highest character that is now handed down to the new American corporation.

The American corporation of Thomas Nelson & Sons will be an important factor in the Bible business. It will produce American-made Bibles and Prayer Books, manufactured at its own manufacturing plant in New York, equipped with the most approved modern appliances. At the same time it will have all the advantages of close association with the great printing plants of Eyre & Spottiswoode in London and Thomas Nelson & Sons in Edinburgh. These great printing and publishing firms employ in the aggregate over 3000 men; their works are equipped with the most up-to-date machinery, and their imprint is a guarantee of excellence in manufacture.

The American corporation will thus be in a position to offer a comprehensive and attractive line of Bibles, and Testaments (both Authorized and Revised Versions,) Prayer Books, Hymnals and devotional books, their special publications being "The American Revised Bible," (copyrighted;) "The New Marginal Readings Bible of the Protestant Episcopal Church," (copyrighted;) "Nelson's Popular Teachers' Bibles;" "Nelson's Self-Pronouncing Bibles;" Nelson's "Royal" India Paper Bibles and Prayer Books; Eyre & Spottiswoode's "Universal Teachers' Bibles," and Eyre & Spottiswoode's "Variorum Bibles." Its line of Episcopal Prayer Books and Hymnals will embrace every liturgical requisite conforming to the authorized standard of 1892.

The present officers of the new corporation are: President, Samuel Barling, who has been identified with Thomas Nelson & Sons in New York for thirty-five years, and for Vice-Pres., Frederick E. Hafely, who has been connected with the London Bible Warehouse in New York for thirty-five years, and for sixteen years as a partner of the firm of E. & J. B. Young & Co.; Treasurer and Secretary, Mr. William Thomson.

The services of the travelling representatives of both houses will be retained by the new corporation, and all outstanding contracts of both houses will be assumed. All agencies for imported books will be continued as at present.

The new corporation is happily equipped with publications of established merit; its future management will maintain the prestige attached to the retiring houses, and it will be in a position to transact its business with strengthened efficiency.

Concurrently with the formation of the American corporation, the Bible businesses of Eyre & Spottiswoode and Thomas Nelson & Sons in Great Britain have been amalgamated in a limited company called The Eyre & Spottiswoode Bible House, Limited. The other departments of the British businesses of these firms will be continued independently as at present, but all their Bible interests will henceforth be transferred to the new company. New premises will shortly be opened by the company at No. 33 Paternoster Row, London which will contain elegant show rooms and writing rooms, in addition to ample office and warehouse accommodation.

Mr. George M. Brown, manager of the firm of Thomas Nelson & Sons, and Mr. W. Hughes Spottiswoode, son of the late William Spottiswoode, representing the firm of Eyre & Spottiswoode, are at present in this country, and assisted in perfecting and completing the amalgamation.

AGAINST ABOLISHING THE DUTY ON BOOKS.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

Dear Sir: Mr. George P. Brett, president of a "company which imports nearly one-eighth of all the books imported into the United States" would have the duty on books wholly repealed. Of course he would; it being a tenet of the religious belief of the typical Briton, that our entire tariff system which keeps him out of our markets, here fosters monopoly, raises prices, and is generally destructive to our best interests, and should as an immoral thing be sine die abolished.

But in a circular letter accompanying his "A Plea for the Abolition of the Duty on Books" and asking co-operation in his little scheme

Mr. Brett, the representative of the "company which imports nearly one-eighth of all the books imported into the United States," says: "It should be born in mind that The Macmillan Company, of which I am president, has very little pecuniary interest in this matter, The Macmillan Company's business comprising for the most part the publication of books by American authors and the sale of such books in this country as well as their sale and exportation to foreign countries."

Further, the genesis of Mr. Brett's "Plea" seems to have been in a recent ruling of the customs officials of New York that 500 copies of a certain book which he imported, it was claimed were undervalued, caused such an advance in the valuation, with penalty, that the duty levied was nearly 90% instead of 25% on the actual price paid in England.

Here I might with propriety leave Mr. Brett; for on his own showing he is wholly out of court as a witness. His "Plea" will not stand the ordeal of the searchlight, for as importer of "nearly one-eighth of all the books imported," he has, in despite of his disclaimer, a deep interest in this subject and has also a special personal grievance, which would not have been, had there been free foreign trade in books.

But "The Duty on Books" stands upon firmer and on justifiable ground, irrespective of Mr. Brett's interests and his grievances. It is a part of that great national system of Protection, which from 1861 to 1865, in conjunction with the greenback, caused the edict to go forth that this nation "shall not perish from the earth." Without protection and the greenback the Battle of Gettysburg would never have been fought and the noble name of Meade would have been unknown in our history. Our banner, to the perpetual joy of "our kin beyond sea," would have gone down in dishonor and disgrace, months before July, 1863.

For now, forty-two years (1861-1903) we have in war and in peace lived under protection. During the years immediately following the war—1865-1893—through the efforts to reach the gold standard of payment, by contraction of the currency, both paper and silver, protection was subjected to one of the most trying financial ordeals in history, but to-day "the fact," even according to Mr. Brett, "is the supremacy of America which has long been manifest in economic matters—in matters of trade and finance—is also being plainly discernible in matters literary."

Not only is protection an enlightened policy which has vindicated itself as a policy to us, and to all mankind who are not judicially blind, but it is just. No man can in these United States raise wheat, corn, oats, or sheep, make iron, mine coal, raise cotton or make cotton or woolen fabrics, make paper or type, print or bind books or publish them without taxes entering into all these products and processes as a part of their cost. Therefore, the government that permits foreigners to enter the markets and the country created and maintained by these producers, without paying taxes, equal to those paid by its own, has abdicated all moral right to exist and should for pure wickedness or stupidity be abolished.

In 1885 Mr. William J Harris, M.P. for one of the divisions of Devonshire, demonstrated by elaborate calculation, that the English farmer paid 15½% of his gross product in taxes; and yet his government has long permitted all sorts of barbarians, on the plea of cheap food, to enter untaxed into British markets in competition with these 15½% taxed subjects, and unmoved sees its own agriculture destroyed. God forbid that we should ever take one single economic lesson from such a people!

But Mr. Brett's own figures vindicate our entire policy of protection; for our own publishing industry could only have developed as it has but amid other highly developed industries. He shows that while in 1899 we imported books of the value of $1,489,297, we imported in 1901 no more than $1,705,102 and that while in 1899 we exported $2,700,000, in eleven months of 1902 we exported $4,000,000 and "that the supremacy of America which has long been manifest in economic matters—in matters of trade and finance—is also becoming plainly discernible in matters literary." Yes! and because we have done justice to all of our own producers. While taxes are levied on our own people so are they levied on "the company which imports nearly one-eighth of all the books imported into the United States," and on all other comers, whether they import books, iron, steel, calico, crockery or wheat.

The lesson taught by Mr. Brett, his facts and his figures, is to let the tariff on books and on all other commodities alone. These duties have justified their right to exist, even to "the tax on knowledge." In civilization nothing whatever having value can be had without taxation and the more civilized we become, the more does taxation enter into and be appreciated in our lives. But in these United States, "the taxation on knowledge," stands not in the way of more "knowledge" than the people seem to want. If there were not to-day, in New York City alone, tons upon tons of good books which do not find a compensating market, the last "Annual Summary Number" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY and the offering of "net" subscription books at 30% off, payable in dribs—equal indeed to 50% off cash down—would demonstrate conclusively that we, at home, are making too many books.

Therefore, in the name of justice do I, for one, protest against letting the Englishman untaxed, into this already over supplied and American-taxed market, with his literary wares and products. Before March 3, 1861, we were long made "the swill tub of the world." Let it be impossible for this expression to be, after forty-two years, again applicable to us. Let us maintain unbroken, even by a single file, our industrial line of battle and this will form a necessary and a solid foundation for that Monroe doctrine which we have so recently and so proudly vindicated, and must ever stand to and vindicate against all comers, whether they be small or great, among the smallest or the greatest of the powers of the earth.

Yours very truly,

HENRY CAREY BAIRD.

PHILADELPHIA, February 16, 1903.

"MESSAGES AND PAPERS" AGAIN DENOUNCED.

A HEARING was given last week in the House of Representatives by the House Committee on Printing on the resolution introduced by Representative Henry C. Smith, of Michigan, for an investigation into the matter of the printing of "The Messages and Documents of the Presidents" by a private concern.

Mr. Smith explained that in November last the Secretary of the so-called Bureau of National Literature, that is now publishing the work, Mr. Lamson, wrote to A. B. Bragdon, Monroe, Mich., inclosing a certificate entitling him to "an option on one copy of the supplemental volume of the 'Messages and Papers of the Presidents.'" The letter added:

> You will be pleased to know that this volume makes complete all the messages of the late President McKinley, including his last public utterance at Buffalo, which ranks as one of his ablest addresses. It also embraces the messages of President Roosevelt to date. . . . There was no appropriation made by Congress for the publishing of the supplemental volume, therefore, on account of many requests for the same, the work was taken up by the Bureau of National Literature and Art and a small pro rata charge made for each volume. Therefore, should you desire a copy, immediate action is necessary in order that your printing and binding order may be placed immediately. If you wish to secure this volume return application cards with amount, $3.40, before date of expiration of option.

A number of other instances were recited by Mr. Smith of persons receiving this circular letter of the Bureau of National Literature. It is regarded as singular that this bureau has been able to obtain the names and Post-Office addresses of the persons who were furnished the volumes under the direction of the Senators and Representatives in accordance with the law providing for the distribution of the work.

Mr. Smith made an argument in favor of the resolution and submitted a statement in which he declared that the matter contained in the book is not legally copyrighted. He urged that Congress should so declare. He said that the language of the federal statutes forbidding the copyrighting of government publications is strong enough to warrant interference by the proper authorities. He further said that the government should republish the papers for public distribution. No action was taken by the committee.

COMMUNICATIONS.

PLEASE HELP THE "SHUT-IN."

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: The other day I received a letter from a cultured gentlewoman of Mississippi, whose mother has been a "Shut-In" since this girl's birth in 1860, the mother never off her bed since that year. The daughter writes: "I would be pleased to have a book entitled 'The Princess of Glendale;' it is a story of Southern home life on a big plantation. It will help to brighten some sad moments." Any one having such and willing to mail to this lady of culture who so heroically endures so much privation to nurse the suffering mother, kindly communicate with

WILLIAM T. TOTTEN.

BOOKTRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

A NEW MANAGER FOR THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION.

EDWIN H. LOVELESS has resigned his position as secretary-treasurer of the Stationers' Board of Trade to become manager of the American Publishers' Association. Mr. Loveless has been connected with the Stationers' Board of Trade since 1881, first as a clerk in the Information Department, and since 1898 as secretary and treasurer. To his aggressive enterprise much of the success of the Board is due, and these qualities also will be of immense service in his new position. Mr. Loveless will take charge of his new office on March 1.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

FRANCE proposes to commemorate the genius of Renan not only by a statue, but also by a "Golden Book." All the great writers and statesmen of the day are being asked to contribute testimonials to the book, and the response has been enthusiastically eulogistic.

RICHARD BAGOT is much disturbed because certain literary reviews have stated that the characters of his "Donna Diana" are modelled upon living persons, prominent in Roman society, and have in some instances named the alleged originals. Mr. Bagot denies absolutely that any of his pictures are portraits.

THE author of "The Youth of la Grande Mademoiselle," recently published in an authorized English version by G. P. Putnam's Sons, is Mme. Charles Vincens, who took her pseudonym of Arvède Barine, because she believed that a man's name attached to the title-page of historical biography bore more weight than a woman's.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

P. F. COLLIER, of Collier's Weekly, will establish a branch of his publishing business in London.

J. RAY PECK, formerly with the Burrows Brothers Company has taken charge of the book department of Loeser in Brooklyn, N. Y.

WM. R. JENKINS has made arrangements to publish Miss K. N. Steele's "Simple Rules for Bridge." Beginning with the first of January they have made the retail price of the book 25 cents.

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE PUBLISHING CORPORATION, Manchester, N. H., announce that they have just brought out the second edition of George Franklyn Willey's "Solitaire," a romance of the Willey slide in the White Mountains. The first edition was entirely exhausted a week after publication.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish in this country the complete library edition of Ruskin's works edited by Cook and Wedderburn. Every original illustration will be included in this edition, together with a number of unpublished plates already engraved. The edition will be complete in thirty volumes, the price of each of which will be seven dollars.

WILLIAM C. EDWARDS, who has been connected for upwards of ten years with Scrantom, Wetmore & Co., of Rochester, N. Y., has resigned his position there and joined the staff of Loring, Short & Harmon at Portland, Me. Publishers and others are requested to note the change and hereafter to send their book announcements, notices and catalogues to Mr. Edwards at Portland.

A. H. BULLEN, London, has in press a volume on the subject of copyright law by Henry A. Hinkson, of the Inner Temple. The work is intended to be a vade mecum, from an Englishman's point of view, for authors, editors, publishers, and others who are commercially or otherwise interested in the statutes relating to copyright. The volume will contain the latest decisions on the subject.

FREDERICK J. DRAKE & Co., 352 Dearborn Street, Chicago, have just brought out Frederick T. Hodgson's work, entitled "Common-Sense Handrailing." They will publish on March 15 the author's life work, a treatise on the "Practical Uses of the Steel Square," which will be in two volumes. Mr. Hodgson's work on "Modern Carpentry," published last September, has gone into the 30th thousand.

JOHN LANE announces a novel entitled "Cornet Strong of Ireton's Horse," an episode of the Ironsides, by Dora Greenwell McChesney, author of "Beatrix Infelix," etc., with eight full-page illustrations by Maurice Grieffenhagen. The author is well known as a contributor to the New York Evening Post. Her story opens in New England, in the early settling days, and the plot is cleverly veiled leaving the reader in doubt almost to the very end.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Ralph Waldo Emerson, which occurs on May 25, will publish a final edition of his works to be known as the Centenary edition. Considerable new matter will be added to the text of the Riverside edition, edited by J. Elliot Cabot, which forms the basis of the new edition. An introduction has been prepared for the Centenary edition by Edward Waldo Emerson who has also prepared the notes.

JAMES POTT & Co. have just published in The Bookman Biographies Series a monograph on Carlyle, by G. K. Chesterton and J. E. Hodder Williams, and one on Robert Louis Stevenson, by an anonymous writer. These volumes are brought out here by arrangement with Hodder & Stoughton the publishers of the London Bookman, and are very fully illustrated. They will publish shortly a volume on "The Gowrie Conspiracy," by Samuel Cowan, author of "Who Wrote the Casket Letters," etc.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY announce that the third and concluding volume of Chambers's "Cyclopædia of English Literature" is now in active preparation and that in the distinction of its contributors, and especially in the interest which it should have for this country by reason of the fact that it deals comprehensively and contemporaneously with American literature, it will be the most important of the three volumes of that unique work. Among the contributors are mentioned Mr. Swinburne and Mr. Watts Dunton.

A. S. BARNES & Co. have in preparation a work on "The Real Benedict Arnold," by Charles Burr Todd. While emphasizing Arnold's services to the Colonies, Mr. Todd does not condone Arnold's treason. He shows that it was the influence of the traitor's wife and his fear of losing her should her own treasonable correspondence with the British officers be discovered which induced Arnold to betray his country, and not the gross injustice of Congress nor the calumnies of paper generals—the motives generally ascribed.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish shortly a beginner's history of the United States, by Professor Edward Channing, of Harvard, entitled "First Lessons in United States History;" "Pure Sociology," a treatise on the origin and spontaneous development of society, by Lester F. Ward; Israel Zangwill's new book, "The Grey Wig," a collection of stories of life among the London Jews; a volume on "Heredity and Social Progress," by Professor Simon N. Patten, of the University of Pennsylvania; also, a new volume in the American Sportsman's Library, edited by Caspar Whitney, on "Waterfowl," by Leonard C. Sanford and T. S. Van Dyke, with illustrations by L. A. Fuertes, A. B. Frost and C. L. Bull.

BRENTANO'S announce new editions of "The Confessions of a Young Man" and Hamilton's "Modern Scientific Whist." They have also issued a "What Shall We Eat To-day" card, which can be hung up in the kitchen. By suggesting dainty dishes for each day in the week, this card should make life bearable for both cook and mistress. They will publish on April 1st an unabridged translation of Senancour's "Obermann." It will be remembered that Senancour was the Frenchman who died with the famous saying, "Eternity, be thou my refuge!" on his lips, and as for the remarkable series of letters gathered under the title of "Obermann," since the first appearance of the book in the early years of the nineteenth century, its author has been almost as widely discussed as "Hamlet." Not inaptly, one critic refers to "Obermann" as a book of the sorrows and aspirations of the soul.

WITH the publication early this spring, by McClure, Phillips & Company, of a "Memorial Volume" on George Douglas Brown, the curtain will be rung down upon brief and poignant literary tragedy. The sum of the young author's contribution to the world of letters will be complete—sadly small as to quantity, but great in promise and quality. This new volume will give to the admirers of the ill-fated young author's "The House with the Green Shutters" an opportunity to know how great was the breadth of his literary craftsmanship. It will contain his more serious efforts, most of them never before published, among other things, essays on Hamlet, on Burns, on Meredith, short stories and verses. The volume has been edited by an old friend of Mr. Brown's, D. S. Meldrum, who has also furnished the memoir which prefaces it. There will be a frontispiece portrait from an etching by William Strong. Brown's "House with the Green Shutters" has just gone into its eleventh edition.

HERBERT S. STONE & Co., Chicago, have in press a book by a new writer, Richard P. Greaves, to be entitled "Brewster's Millions." The hero is a New York fellow of good parts who, to save an inheritance of ten millions, starts out to spend a fortune of one million in a year. An eccentric uncle, ignorant of the slightly earlier legacy, leaves him seven millions to be delivered at the expiration of the year on the condition that at that time he is penniless and has proved himself a capable business man. The problem that confronts Brewster is to spend his legacy without proving himself either reckless or dissipated. He has ideas about the disposition of the ten millions which are not those of the uncle when he tried to supply an alternative if the nephew failed him. His adventures in pursuit of poverty are not of the usual kind, and his disappointments are funny in quite a new way. They will also publish in the spring a new book by the author of "The Story of Mary MacLane." It is said to be quite different in character from the first one, and to be written with more reserve.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready F. T. Bullen's first actual novel, entitled "A Whaleman's Wife." The South Sea whaling fishery of New England is his theme, and new pictures of that industry are presented. A love story beginning in Vermont is the thread on which are hung many stirring incidents. A rustic Yankee from the Green Mountain State is an interesting central figure. They have also nearly ready "Appleton's Annual Cyclopædia for 1902," which will have among its special features articles on aerial navigation, submarine navigation, and wireless telegraphy, by Charles Coleman Stoddard, formerly connected with the U. S. Geological Survey; also, another volume in their Novelettes de Luxe Series, entitled "The Stirrup Cup," a story, by J. A. Tyson, of Aaron Burr before he became involved in the tumultuous course of his later career. They will bring out in the near future an American edition of "A Century of French Romance," which has been prepared under the superintendence of Edmund Gosse. It will include twenty representative French novels, only one volume being chosen from the works of a single author. The price of the series, which will be published by subscription, will range from $80 to $1000.

A. C. MCCLURG & Co. have in preparation a romance of the Danish Conquest of Britain, entitled "The Ward of King Canute," by Ottilie A. Liljencrantz, author of "The Thrall of Leif the Lucky," with illustrations in color by the Kinneys; "Felicitas," by Felix Dahn, the second volume in the author's trio of historical romances based on the early struggles between Germany and Rome, translated by Mary J. Safford; "A Selection from the Best English Essays," with a historical and critical study of English prose style, by Sherwin Cody, which will be brought out uniform in style with his "Selection from the World's Greatest Short Stories;" "The Souls of Black Folk," an unusually earnest and able plea for the spiritual uplifting of the negro, by Professor William Burghhardt Du Bois of the University of Atlanta; "Reflections of a Lonely Man," by A. C. M., an entertaining and original little volume, in which humor and philosophy are judiciously mingled; "Cartoons by McCutcheon," including those made for the Chicago Record-Herald on the occasion of Prince Henry's visit, with an introduction by George Ade; "The Law of Mental Medicine," by Dr. Thomson J. Hudson, of whose former work, "The Law of Psychic Phenomena," nearly 60,000 copies have been sold; also, "An Index to Poetry and Recitations," edited by Edith Granger, who has indexed over 300 standard and popular collections comprising nearly 30,000 titles arranged alphabetically under title, author and first line.

THE BIBLIOPHILE SOCIETY, of Boston, has in hand for publication (for its members only) the original manuscript journal kept by Major André while serving on the staff of Major-General Grey in the American Revolution. This journal was recently discovered by Earl Grey, of Howick, Northumberland, in opening an old chest of books and papers inherited from his ancestor, General Grey. It had not seen the light for more than a hundred years. The diary opens in June, 1777, the British forces then being under General Sir William Howe, and ends at the close of 1778, with the forces under General Sir Henry Clinton. It follows closely the operations of the British army within that period, particularly that part of it in which Major-General Grey was actively engaged. There are forty-four maps of States and towns; plans and sketches of fortresses, military posts, battlefields and encampments. The manuscript is unpublished, not even extracts from it ever having been printed. It was recently purchased from Earl Grey at private sale by a wealthy American—a member of the Bibliophile Society—for a sum well up in the thousands of dollars. The forty-four maps are all to be reproduced in facsimile, and will appear with the entire text some time during the present year. The work will be prefaced with an introduction by Senator Lodge. The Bibliophile Society, it may be well to state, is a book club, and should not be confused with the "International Bibliophile Society" organized for the purpose of exploiting the sale of subscription books.

Charles Scribner's Sons announce an interesting book by H. E. Parkhurst, author of "How to Tell the Birds," etc., entitled "Trees, Shrubs and Vines of the North-Eastern United States." The book gives a general account and explicit botanical details of all the trees, shrubs, and vines of this large area. It is especially designed for those who have never studied botany, the plants being so classified that, with the assistance of a few pages of plant structure and without a microscope, the non-botanical reader can easily familiarize himself with all the tree, shrub, and vine life around him. It also contains descriptions, sufficient for identification, of our most important hardy foreign growth of the same sort, nearly all of which is found in that most notable specimen of extensive landscape gardening in the country, the New York Central Park. As a thread on which to string the account of that remarkable display, four short routes are indicated, each accompanied by a map, where one will find most of the arboreal species, the descriptions being no less useful for those beyond reach of the park. This is the first complete list of the park since that of 1875, which was a mere botanical catalogue. The volume will have upwards of 100 illustrations and several maps. They will publish next month a novel by Annie Flint, to be entitled "A Girl of Ideas." It is a story of the business career of a girl whose imagination is her only capital. The heroine at first tries to make a living as a writer, but failing in this she opens an office and sells her ideas to writers of established reputations. Her scheme meets with instant success and she becomes a distinguished author by proxy. All goes on swimmingly, until she makes a business mistake, seriously injuring the literary reputation of a well-known writer. Many apparently complex situations occur. How she extricates herself and her patron from the most embarrassing of all, when it has become unbearable to both, makes the climax of the book.

G. P. Putnam's Sons have just issued a volume on "Augustus Cæsar and the Organization of the Empire of Rome," by John B. Firth, in the Heroes of the Nations series; also, a work on "The American Republic and its Government," an analysis of the government of the United States, with a consideration of its fundamental principles and of its relations to the States and Territories, by Professor James Albert Woodburn, of the Indiana University. They announce the second part of Professor Leo Wiener's "Anthology of Russian Literature," which will cover the subject from the close of the eighteenth century to the close of the nineteenth century, the first part having included Russian literature from the earliest times to the close of the eighteenth century; "In Piccadilly," a new novel by Mr. Swift, who tells a story out of the general run of fiction; "Sociology, the Science of Human Society," by Dr. J. H. W. Stuckenberg, which will be brought out in two volumes; "Political Parties and Party Problems in the United States," a sketch of American party history and of the development and operations of party machinery, together with a consideration of certain party problems in their relation to political morality, by Professor James Albert Woodburn, whose work on "The American Republic and its Government" has just been brought out; also, a new and revised edition of Stephen Paget's work on "Experiments on Animals," with an introduction by Lord Lister, which will form one of the Science Series volumes. They have also in preparation a new series to be brought out under the general title of Little French Masterpieces, under the general editorship of Alexander Jessup. The series will include the most noteworthy work of these French writers who have produced "little masterpieces." The first group will be six volumes devoted to fiction—including Merimée, Flaubert, Gautier, Daudet, Maupassant and Balzac. Each author will be introduced by a writer best equipped for the task. For instance, Grace King will furnish the introduction to Merimée's stories; Frank T. Marzials that to Flaubert's stories; Gautier's stories will be introduced by Walter Herries Pollock; Daudet's by William P. Trent; Maupassant's by Frédéric César de Sumichrast; and Balzac's by Ferdinand Brunetière. The translations for the first group will be made by George Burnham Ives. Each volume will contain a bibliography and a photogravure frontispiece.

Harper & Brothers have in preparation the North American Review articles on "Christian Science," in which Mark Twain gives a humorous exposition of that cult, full of laughable quips and sallies of wit, based partly on fact and partly on exaggeration of facts; a collection of speeches delivered on various occasions by Emperor William, which will be entitled "The Kaiser's Speeches," translated by Wolf von Schierbrand, whose recent work on Germany commanded respectful attention here and abroad; a book on "How to Keep Household Accounts," a handbook of family finance, by Charles Waldo Haskins, late Dean and Professor of Auditing and of the History of Accountancy in the School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance of New York University, who gives suggestions to housekeepers on how to save time, money, and worry, in a manner that is very clear and readily understood, requiring no previous knowledge of bookkeeping; also, "New Conceptions in Science," in various fields, by Carl Snyder, with illustrations. In the department of fiction they have a long list among which we note "The Redfields Succession," another Virginian story, by Henry B. Boone and Kenneth Brown, authors of "Eastover Court House"; "The Bishop," by Cyrus Townsend Brady, stories of a militant unmarried bishop, whose work among the rough-and-ready men of Western camps, forts and villages, results in his sharing in many incidents of frontier life; "The Love of Monsieur," a dashing romance of the 17th or 18th century, by George Gibbs, author of "In Search of Mademoiselle;" "The Substitute," a story of the South, by Will N. Harben, author of "Abner Daniel;" "Questionable Shapes," by William Dean Howells, a work of fiction in which the author makes incursions into the unknown; "Walda," by Mary Holland Kinkaid, a story of a religious community in which love and marriage are tacitly discouraged; "The Triumphs of Life," by William Farquhar Payson, author of "John Vytal," the scene of which is laid in Washington Square, New York, and Bristol, R. I.; "Semper Idem," by Howard Pyle, who brings home to the reader a realization of how Christ would probably be received were he to come now; "Sinful Peck," by Morgan Robertson, a funny story of an unintentional sailing voyage to Singapore; also, Mrs. Ward's new story "Lady Rose's Daughter." Two new juveniles just ready are "Pearl Island," a story for boys of the Robinson Crusoe kind, by Andrew Caster, and "The New Boy at Dale," by Charles Edward Rich, both of which are illustrated by Florence Scovel Shinn. Harper & Brothers write us that they have not, as was announced in our issue for February 7, made arrangements to bring out here Austin Brereton's "Thirty Years at the Lyceum."

PUTNAM PLACE,

BY

Grace Lathrop Collin.

Post 8vo, Ornamented Cloth,

$1.50.

Putnam Place is a neighborhood where the dwellers are intimately acquainted and live in a rather exclusive circle. Everybody knows everything that happens to everybody else, and small happenings become significant in the skilful hands of this author. The quarrel between Mrs. Hooper and Miss Lattimer, for instance, though the only victim was a speckled hen, is nevertheless a momentous affair to the participants, and when it is over and they are reconciled the satisfaction is keenly shared by the reader. It is all in the way it is written.

The SOCIALIST and the PRINCE

A Novel of California Life

THE scenes and action are in the days of the anti-Chinese labor agitation. Paul Stryne, leader of the workingmen, and Ruspoli, an Italian prince, are rivals for the hand of Theodosia Peyton, the daughter of a millionaire. Swayed now by the courtly grace and subtle class sympathy of the prince, now by the masterful will and altruistic purpose of the socialist, the impressionable girl, in a mood which overpowers her for the time, betroths herself first to one and then to the other. There are many situations of dramatic power, from the love scenes to the street riots, and from the altruist's lofty orations to the jealous lover's duel with Prince Ruspoli. Social conditions are strongly contrasted, and the interest is intense throughout.

The Annual
American Catalogue
CUMULATED
1900–1902

THE ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE, Cumulated, 1900-1902, is now in preparation, and will include in one alphabet the short-title lists of the books of 1900, 1901 and 1902, giving information of the books recorded by author, title, subject and series. This cumulation is to continue annually until a five-yearly volume of "The American Catalogue" in its new shape is reached. This form of catalogue has been generally accepted as a desirable, practical working tool for the trade, supplementing as it will do, from year to year, the last issue of the five-yearly "American Catalogue," without the need of consulting several alphabets in several volumes.

THE PIT

"The Epic of the Wheat"

By FRANK NORRIS

Author of "The Octopus"

The story of a woman's love and its entanglement with a great wheat speculation. The most vital and thrilling novel of active American business life yet published, and the "best selling" book in the United States. $1.50

HAMILTON W. MABIE in The Outlook: "In the handling of his main theme 'The Pit' shows the touch of a master."

HENRY MILLS ALDEN in Harper's Magazine: "He made the epic poetical again and imbued it with the strong, fiery spirit of the California soil and air."

OWEN WISTER in The World's Work: "It belongs to a group of financial novels. . . . I think Frank Norris has outstripped them all."

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS in North American Review: "The novels he left are sufficient for his fame."

First 100,000 Printed in the First 11 Months

The Leopard's Spots

A powerful and absorbing novel of the white man in the South, pronounced the only offset to "Uncle Tom's Cabin" ever written. The best selling book for months in the South and West. Eastern readers will probably soon realize that here is the Southerner's view of the "negro problem," which is attracting so much attention, and then it will not take long to circulate the second hundred thousand. Illus., $1.50

Second Large Printing Before Publication

The Woman Who Toils

This record of experiences as factory girls by Mrs. JOHN VAN VORST and MARIE VAN VORST has created a real sensation. Mr. Roosevelt's strong prefatory letter pointing out the danger of "race suicide," and the facts set forth regarding child labor, are arousing the widest comment.
